

The new era of investor relations

Investor relations are shifting from reporting to shaping perception. As passive capital grows and retail investors become more active and digital, market sentiment is increasingly shaped by both official company information and real-time online discussion. Institutions are adapting but a gap remains between message and understanding. Clarity and consistency now determine how companies are valued.

